Munitions Body Drafts Tax Bill, Limits War Gain

Measure Would Limit Income, Provide Rigid Industrial Draft

PAY AS YOU FIGHT

Industrial Wartime Earnings Would Be Restricted to 3 Per Cent

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A drastic income tax bill aimed at taking profit out of war, and backed by an industrial draft so rigid that it has the front lines as an alternative, was made public Wednesday by the Senate Munitions Committee to be introduced next week after preliminary hearings are concluded.

Industrial wartime earnings would be limited to three per cent and industrial leaders unwilling to "co-operate in the war effort" would be told to go to the trenches instead.

The measure also would reach into the pockets of the smaller earner to make every individual help the cost of conflict while it goes on.

The committee predicted in a statement that "it will do more than any other proposal before congress to limit profiteering and to avoid the disastrous and possibly catastrophic results of another post-war inflation."

Leaders seek action on Rival Bill. Meanwhile, house leaders prepared to bring the McSwain bill out for debate Wednesday. It incorporates part of the proposals of Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board under President Wilson. It was generally understood an effort would be made to amend the McSwain bill to attach to it some of the provisions carried in the committee plan drafted by John T. Flynn, economist adviser of the group.

The senate committee's program opened with a statement which said: "It is hereby declared to be the intention of Congress that no person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States shall profit in any manner whatsoever from the conduct of any war to which the United States is or may be a party."

Tax Provisions Made. Then followed the tax features. For industry, these provided:

A 50 per cent tax on net profit on capital investment of six per cent or less.

A 100 per cent tax on all net profit in excess of six per cent.

For individuals it provided:

A normal tax of six per cent on all earnings above exemptions.

A surtax schedule which graduated up to a point where it took $2,800 of an income of $10,000.

A 94 per cent surtax on all net earnings in excess of $10,000.

Exemptions likewise were trimmed far below those prevailing in the present law.

Unmarried persons would have an exemption of $500, instead of the $1,000 in the present law. Married persons would have an exemption of $1,000 instead of $2,500, and exemptions of dependents would be cut from $100 in the present law to $100 in the proposed war law.

Industrial deductions from tax liability were described in the committee report as "much more severe" than those allowed in peace time income tax measures.

Grand Jury Still Unreported at 3 p. m. Wednesday

Session Expected to Be Completed, However, Late Wednesday

2 CIVIL SUITS HEARD

Stuckey-Washburn Trial to Reach Jury Later in Day

The Hempstead county grand jury, in session since Monday, had not reported at 3 p. m. Wednesday, reports from Washington said.

The grand jury, however, was expected to complete its session some time late Wednesday.

Disposition of only one civil suit was made Tuesday. In a jury trial, C. A. Shipp was awarded a verdict over Motor Finance Co.

All of Wednesday morning was consumed with the civil suit labeled J. P. Stuckey vs. A. H. Washburn, publisher of Hope Star.

Stuckey, a farmer, is seeking to collect damages for a mule the publisher killed several weeks ago in an automobile accident on paved highway 61 east of Hope.

More than a dozen persons testified during the morning. Arguments by attorneys started at 2 p. m. The case was expected to reach the jury some time late in the day.

Joe Palmer Must Die in Chair for Death of Prison Guard

AUSTIN, Texas.—(AP)—Joe Palmer, companion of Raymond Hamilton in the spectacular break from the Texas penitentiary death house at Huntsville last summer, lost his last court chance of escaping the electric chair, when the court of criminal appeals Wednesday overruled a motion for rehearing of his appeal.

Farrish, Des Arc, Paul Draughn, Hot Springs, E. Carl Tisdale, Hot Springs; Clarence Doon, Caraway; L. O. Burt and T. B. Harte, Melbourne; E. B. Ewing, Gurdon; Pinnick Farmer, West Helena; J. H. State Liquor Permits Brought to 233 Tuesday

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The number of licenses for retail dealers in liquor in Arkansas was brought to 233 Tuesday as Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman issued 14 permits.

No action was taken on applications from Biscoe and Grady, pending further consideration of protests filed by residents of the towns.

Wiseman said he would study protesting petitions before acting on several applications for permits in residential sections of Little Rock.

Retail permits were issued Tuesday to Miss Ruth Smith, Texarkana; John H. Bryson, Altholmer; W. W. Matthews, Holly Grove; R. H. Farrish, Des Arc; Paul Draughn, Hot Springs; E. THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Several members of Congress are feeling a bit silly since the NRA investigation began to warm up.

They are in that group which once was hollering about the oppression of the "small business man" by codes. Some of the "small business men" have been on exhibit and they looked neither small nor oppressed.

There must be some honest little fellows who have been hurt by NRA. Plenty of monopolistic practices were legalized under the General Johnson regime. The complaint of most of them is that codes haven't been adequately enforced—which left those complying at a disadvantage.

But the "little fellows" whose cause such folks as Senator King of Utah Senator Nye of North Dakota, and the ineffectual Congressman Virginia Jenckes of Indiana espoused turned out to be gent who objected to enforcement rather than non-enforcement, to minimum wages and collective bargaining.

Some of them, testimony brought out, had paid wages as low as three and five cents an hour before NRA.

Men's clothing happens to be a highly competitive industry. Its code (Continued on page four)

River Plays Iceman--High Price!

Iceman would have slim pickings this summer in Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., if residents could have harpooned all the ice that floated past their doors as a flood raged through the city to take $100,000 toll. They were awakened after the spillway of a dam three miles away had been washed out by the swollen Wisconsin river to discover cakes of ice weighing as high as 700 pounds floating in their yards. This picture shows Second avenue during the deluge.

Homer Burke Purchases First Driver's License

The first driver's license issued here was purchased Wednesday by Homer Burke, night policeman.

Revenue from these license fees will be used to maintain the newly created state police force.

The license fee is 50 cents per calendar year for each car owner, but any member of the same family over 16 may use the same license.

The license card, bearing a brief description of the applicant and names of members of the family entitled to use the license, should be kept in the car so it can be displayed on demand of officers, revenue agents said.

Report Declares Couch Backs Long

Methodist Group Sees Race for Leadership of "Developing Fascism"

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Father Charles E. Coughlin and Senator Huey P. Long were described by the Methodist Federation for Social Service Tuesday night as being in a race, along with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, "for the leadership of our developing 'Fascism.'"

Among Long's backers the report names Harvey C. Couch, power and railroad magnate, and Rudolph Hecht, New Orleans banker.

"The triangular contest in vituperation on the air between Johnson, Coughlin and Long was the preliminary try-out in the race," said a report prepared by the federation secretaries, Winifred L. Chappell.

The report, described by the federation as an analysis of the programs of Senator Long and Father Coughlin, mentions General Johnson only to link him, as an ally of President Roosevelt, in the contest.

"All three of these contests for leadership of the enswarmed masses," the report concludes, "are seeking to reform and maintain the system described by our General Conference as 'unethical, unchristian and anti-social.'"

"The profit system refuses to permit itself to be regulated as Roosevelt and Coughlin propose. Still less does capitalism decline to permit the fulfillment of the fantastic promises of Huey Long."

How to Exchange 1934 Bankhead Tags Is Given

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The AAA announced Wednesday the procedure which holders of unused 1934 Bankhead act tax exemption certificates must follow in exchanging them for 1935 certificates.

All exchanges must be made through the offices of county assistants in cotton production, the administration aid, and all certificates accepted will be forwarded to Washington where new certificates will be issued and returned to county assistants for delivery to the producer.

The new certificates then will be accepted by internal revenue collectors in return for the existing tax on cotton from this year's crop.

Printed forms on which producers' old certificates may apply for exchange will be available in the offices of county assistants within a few weeks, the administration said.

Officers Probe Mystery Shooting

Benton Man Is Seriously Wounded by Unknown Assailant

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Blinded by a bullet which passed through nerves, O. F. Ford, 37, of Benton, was in a serious condition in a Little Rock hospital Wednesday as Saline county officers investigated the mystery surrounding the shooting.

Ford was wounded about 1 a. m. Tuesday morning as he lay in bed at his home at Benton. A brother, Obe Ford, said he was awakened the same bed and that he was awakened by some one running his hand over Ford's face. Almost immediately, Obe said, one shot was fired. Obe said he heard some one run out the door but was unable to see in the darkness.

Deputy Sheriff W. A. Cox said both men had revolvers under their pillows but that examination showed neither man had been fired.

O. F. Ford was brought to a hospital here where attendants said he "isn't doing well at all."

District P-T. A. Meet Slated Here

Mrs. Harry Lemley Speaks Before Council at First April Meeting

The April meeting of the City P-T. A. Council was held Monday afternoon at the city hall with Mrs. Chester Lester presiding.

During a short business session committees were appointed and the program announced for the District P-T. A. meeting to convene in Hope, April 12.

The principal speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Harry Lemley, who gave a most inspiring talk on "Spiritual Training in the Home." The three great phases of child development are the physical, mental and spiritual, and the last is the most important, Mrs. Lemley said.

"A great deal of emphasis is placed on the first two today, and that is important," she concluded, because mothers are guardians of their children's minds and bodies, but we have only to read the daily papers to find that people with magnificent physiques and fine minds often come to destruction because they have dwarfed and perverted souls.

Granted that your child comes from God, what kind of home does he find? Mrs. Lemley asked. Living today is hazardous for anybody, but particularly for the boy or girl who has not the kind of training which develops stability of character. Children are not born perfect, but with great possibilities, and plastic.

God has given them spiritual equipment, but has left the care of it in your hands. The spiritual life of a child is lived behind closed doors. One needs the keys of love and understanding to open the doors, and once inside, one needs tact and infinite wisdom.

Mrs. Lemley concluded her talk with a quotation from Ruskin: "What the world needs is not to graduate, but to backslide into the sympathy of childhood."

New Highway Group Approves Contracts

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Contracts for construction of seven road and bridge projects, aggregating 325,000, were awarded by the State Highway Commission Tuesday in the first meeting attended by the three newly appointed members.

The commission elected Ben Johnson, Fort Smith, vice chairman. It previously had named Dave Block, Wynne, as chairman, after the recent resignation of J. S. Cargile of Arkadelphia.

The new commissioners who attended were A. L. Smith, Siloam Springs, Dr. W. F. Cox, Pocahontas, and E. C. Porter, Clarksville.

The legislature recently increased the commission from five to seven members, one from each congressional district.

No Disposition of Legislative Acts, Governor Hunting

Bill to Extend Land Redemption Period Is Vetoed Wednesday

One of the bills is Senator Perish's bill legalizing permitted betting on dog races. Another is Representative Garner's bill providing for a specific method of allocating highway construction funds, which were said to have been objected to by officials of the Federal Bureau of Roads.

Before leaving the city, Governor Futrell vetoed a bill which sought to extend the redemption period for lands within improvement districts from one to three years.

Another bill remaining on the governor's desk upon which he has taken no action is Representative Thompson's bill requiring finance companies to file a record of all "trust certificates" or agreements in the county where they are made.

Relief Rolls Decline. LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The county clerk runs risk of removal from office if he fails to certify delinquent property to the state, Assistant Attorney General Guy E. Williams held Wednesday in an opinion to Clerk W. Bishop, of Little Rock county.

Williams, in an opinion Wednesday to the State Construction Commission, upheld acts to provide $125,000 in funds for state construction bonds. They become effective June 14.

Williams also held that wholesale liquor dealers could make C. O. D. liquor shipments to licensed retailers within the state.

Progressives Gain in Wisconsin Election

By the Associated Press

Progressives strengthened their positions in Wisconsin and Upton Sinclair's "Epic" party achieved partial success in California to highlight elections in various parts of the nation Wednesday.

Two more Progressives were elected to the Wisconsin senate, bringing the party within one vote of the Democratic majority.

Sinclair forces in California elected one city councilman, and from 10 to 15 "Epic" candidates apparently are assured of their positions in the runoff election.

Chicago Democrats showed a striking display of strength to retain Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

Since it would naturally interest her ex-husbands, that book which Jean Harlow wrote should prove something of a best seller.

Markets

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—A few overnight selling orders were sufficient to depress cotton values at the opening of the market Wednesday and futures were four to seven points lower at the first call.

Liquidation by tired longs and scattered selling by professionals and the trade also were responsible for the early castness.

May opened off four points to 10.92, July sold at 10.35, October at 10.34 and December at 10.36.

Liverpool reported a more cheerful tone although there was still nothing particularly constructive in the news to bring about any worthwhile rally.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Consider Blood Supply in Planning Hygiene

Blood is the most important material in your body. Not only must your tissues be supplied with blood, but the blood must be sufficient in amount, contain enough oxygen, and carry enough anti substances to infection to keep the body free from disease.

Because of this, you should consider the circulation in planning any program of hygiene. For instance, poor posture crowds the heart by adding the pressure of the chest wall and that of the organs to the burden which the heart has to bear, and in this way poor posture is bad for the circulation. Insufficient exercise results in poor muscle tone and poor muscle tone increases the burden of the heart, because it results in congestion in the tissues.

The heart must be a well-functioning organ or it cannot propel the blood in circulation. When it weakens in its work, fluid accumulates, congestion increases, and the burden becomes increasingly great.

One of the first signs of a deficiency in the blood is appearance of anemia. This means that the blood doesn't contain enough red blood cells and hemoglobin, or red coloring matter, or else that certain portions of the body are not sufficiently supplied with blood.

One of the most common causes of anemia is the loss of a good deal of blood from the body following a wound, or disturbance of the periodic functions in women. The blood cells also are destroyed by chronic infections and by invasion of parasites such as occur in malaria. There may also be a failure in the diet of substances necessary to stimulate formation of red blood cells.

When any part of the body becomes suddenly white, it is a sign that the blood vessels have become constricted and that the blood is not going suitably to that part. If a sudden stoppage of the flow of blood to the brain occurs, dizziness and faintness occur, and then loss of consciousness.

There are also certain unusual forms of blood diseases which may be inherited. An example of this is hemophilia, a condition in which the blood does not clot after a wound. This condition affects only male members of a family and is transmitted only by female members.

To build up proper blood, certain substances are important. In the diet, liver and lamb kidneys are essential, because these stimulate the formation of red blood cells better than almost any other foods. An extract which is known to have this power has also been prepared from the wall of the stomach.

Iron is of exceeding importance as a drug for overcoming various forms of anemia and is especially necessary in the development of the red coloring matter in the blood. The vitamins also are known to be useful.

Finally, one of the most significant features of proper formation and maintenance of a good blood supply is rest. In fact, many of the leading authorities emphasize a great deal of rest in bed as the most significant factor in overcoming anemia.

By this is meant complete rest, including avoidance of any muscular or mental effort.

There are various rough-and-ready methods of determining whether the blood is adequate. You may compare the redness of the palms of the hands or of the fingernails, but the scientific method is most certain.

A few drops of blood are taken from a puncture in the ear or fingertip. They are diluted with a solution which keeps the red blood cells in good order. Under the microscope the number of red blood cells is counted.

Comparisons also are made of specimens to determine the percentage of red coloring matter in comparison with normal. These actual measurements show definitely the state of the blood and whether stimulation is necessary.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

It Preaches, But Sermon's Good One— "Green Light" Depicts Doctor's Triumph Over Disaster

There is precious little sense in adopting an air of snooty superiority toward Lloyd C. Douglas' "Green Light" on the ground that it exudes too much sweetness and light. Mr. Douglas writes novels which look on man, his place in the scheme of things, and his progress toward the unattainable with more optimism than is generally current in this discouraged age. He voices a Christianity which neatly blends muscular robustness and mysticism, and he shapes his plot to point his moral.

His books, consequently, are the kind at which it is fashionable to look down one's nose with as much hauteur as can be mustered. But to do that gets nobody anywhere. Mr. Douglas reaches a wide audience, and tells stories which bring hope and encouragement to many people. Since those qualities are none too common nowadays, why complain?

"Green Light" tells about a young surgeon in a midwestern city who has to take the rap when an older, more established physician bungles an operation and lets a patient die. The young man goes a drift, drops out of his profession, and seems to be headed for complete disintegration. But the dean of the local Episcopal cathedral quietly takes him in hand. This man has been through the mill himself, understands human discouragement, rises above doubt, and is able to infuse his sure faith into others. And in the end he gets the doctor straightened out and back on the job. The book is half novel and half sermon. The redeeming feature is that the sermon is a good one. Houghton Mifflin offers it at 2.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Child Training Controversies Confuse Parents on Methods

Another war is setting its guns across the No Man's Land of child controversy.

A well-known educator recently issued a list of ten by-laws to parents concerning certain "dos" and "don'ts" to be observed in the home.

Reaching for his binoculars the head of an experimental school for children challenges the gentleman:

"Better stop that," he warns. "We have just about ceased telling parents what to do. It's all wrong. They are confused. Let parents alone."

Which echoes what I remarked a year ago when I wrote, "All that science is doing is catching up to sensible mothers. Yet these same confused mothers are hysterically rushing to psychology books to catch up with science."

By-Laws Are Simple However, there are still some things to be said.

The ten by-laws referred to above are quite simple things—things any sensible mother or father would do anyway, such as not making promises to a child and habitually breaking them.

"Do not ridicule a child," continues Dr. Farrington, secretary of the Special-School Association of the United States.

"Avoid being domineering. Do not spoil your child by over-indulgence."

"Listen to your child seriously without condescension."

And so on. As experimental schools base their own methods of handling on these very things, it is interesting to hear them refuted as being too complex for the home.

Compulsion Is Needed While I foresaw the need of the new type of school and urged certain changes in a two-military public system, I have wondered since if some of the extreme new-methods now in use have not jumped too far over the fence, and whether the children learning through "interest" rather than "compulsion" will emerge with all the assets needed for a stiff life ahead, a life where must underlies about 90 per cent of what we do. In other words, is there too little regi-

Long Smashes at Roosevelt Again

Ridicules Administration for Backing Down on NRA Test Suit

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long Sunday night declared that President Roosevelt "gave us to understand" that he would run as a third party candidate if the 1932 convention failed to nominate him. Long challenged the president to deny it.

Himself mentioned as possible head of a third party presidential ticket in 1932 Long said:

"Now the Roosevelt brigade is sending out the cry that they very much fear a third party in the United States will upset their staying in office. They ought to be the last to talk about a third party."

"When Roosevelt was making all his promises before his nomination in Chicago, and it looked like we would not be able to hold the thing in line, he gave us to understand he would run as a third party candidate if he failed to secure the nomination, and had asked a member of the United States Senate to be his running mate. Let him deny that."

"They ought not to try to call themselves the Democratic party. The Roosevelt administration should be properly named the St. Vitus dance party."

After he had reviewed his share-the-wealth program, Long launched out on criticism of the Roosevelt administration and its policies.

Charges that the Roosevelt administration had drifted from the principle on which America was founded, Long said:

"Now after having three years of Mr. Hoover's depression, we are in the third year of the much worse Roosevelt depression, and we can look back and see that these Roosevelt recovery schemes were just as much in the direction of recovery as it would be to take the wheels off an automobile to make it run faster."

Long charged that the banking law of the administration "ruthlessly and cruelly drove thousands of banks to the wall and caused millions of bank depositors to lose everything they had."

The Roosevelt economy act cut allowances for disabled soldiers and salaries of government employees, he said, then continued:

"Then the third thing this prince charming administration gave us was that beloved Blue Eagle, or blue buzzard, known as the NRA. No man could run a peanut stand or a power house without he was regulated by an NRA code."

"When the NRA reached the Supreme Court, when we would be told whether it was constitutional or not (and it has been declared unconstitutional by any number of federal courts and state courts) Mr. Roosevelt's administration appears before the Supreme Court and withdraws the appeal so that that court will not pass on it."

"In the meantime, they keep this unconstitutional form of blue buzzard government running in the land because the ordinary man has not the money to spend to fight them through the courts, and they hope to bulldoze and browbeat their way over the suffering and distressed American people for another four years."

mentation in some of the experimental schools and too much in the average public schools?

However that may be, it appears to me that these two leaders are actually on the same side of the fence, their goal being the better understanding of children.

The only difference is that one says, "Let the home help." The other insists, "Let the school do it."

Several Schools of Thought Yet Dr. Chworowsky of the Falk Experimental School in Pittsburgh is right when he says that the parents are puzzled. After all there is not one, but there are several schools of thought in child-handling. The mother who knows "too much" or thinks she does, is worse off than the one who knows too little. We all know the mother who lives with her nose in some guidance book or other and frankly makes her children into experiments.

The unfolding of a little child's mind and a knowledge of his natural development won't hurt any sensible parent and is a real help. But the interpretation of psychology, as such, is best left to the profession. Simple home rules are another thing.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Star Cultivates Sole of Beauty.

Martha Mears, well-known singer, is one actress whose chief concern is with her feet and ankles. She believes that healthy feet, shod in beautiful but comfortable shoes, and trim ankles are the finest attributes to beauty. What's more, she really practices routines that keep her own ankles slender and supple.

Of course, we all know that unless ankles really have surplus flesh and fat on them, there is nothing that can be done to make them smaller. After all, you can't reduce a bone. However, if you want to have a graceful, beautiful walk, here are a few exercises which help to keep Miss Mears' ankles supple and lovely:

Stand on your toes in front of a wall with hands placed lightly against the flat surface. Keeping the knee rigid, raise the right leg backward as far as it will go. Then bend the knee, pointing toes outward. Repeat rapidly twenty times.

When you have finished, do this exercise, too:

Stand with feet a few inches apart. Jump upward, about six inches from the floor, coming down and balancing on the left foot, keeping the right one off the floor. Alternate, rapidly, landing first one one foot and then on the other.

In addition, remember that massage will break down fatty tissues around ankles. Put a bit of cream on your hands and, beginning at the toes, massage upward to the ankles. Use your fingers as well as your palms and make sure that you are bearing down into the flabby flesh.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILICENT GRAYES, secretary to GEORGE H. HARRIS, had her employer in his office and Millicent had a notebook in which Dringold and began to dictate a confession.

In panic she rushes away, registers at a hotel under an assumed name.

JARVIS HARRIS, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a nearby parlor where she is transformed into a blond, then takes her home and introduces her as his secretary. She meets Miss Grace, HARRIS' sister, ROBERT CAINE, and Mrs. HARRIS.

Millicent falls asleep and wakes to find the woman in black dress reading "The woman in black" in her room. Millicent dresses, sees the woman in black drive away, and follows in Robert Caine's car but runs out of gas. She goes to the chauffeur's quarters and finds him dead.

Next morning a detective questions Millicent. She throws the keys to Robert Caine's car into the fountain pool and a moment later sees Mrs. HARRIS watching her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII

THREE steps Millicent had heard to the corridor went on, past her door. Millicent clung to the window ledge.

Mrs. HARRIS stared up at her, the diamond-hard eyes seeming to see through the girl's very soul.

"Good morning," she said. "I presume you've heard the tragic news."

Millicent nodded. For the life of her, words would not come. Had Mrs. HARRIS seen her toss that key container into the pool?

"It's so dreadful," Mrs. HARRIS said. "Harry was an excellent chauffeur. I was really very much attached to him. Although he worked mostly for my husband, are you dressed?"

"I thought that you would be fatigued, so I told them not to call you for breakfast, but the officers are here now, making an investigation. They think something must have been seen lying in wait for Harry when he entered his room. It's really most tragic. But get your clothes on, my dear, and have some breakfast. Then I want to talk with you."

Millicent nodded, slid back from the window and dropped into a chair.

There was something about Mrs. HARRIS and her son, Robert, that filled Millicent with apprehension. They seemed so cold-blooded, so utterly merciless, and they seemed to drop up so unexpectedly. She could almost have sworn there was no one in sight when she started to toss that key container into the pool. Yet Mrs. HARRIS must have been standing there all the time.

Millicent faced herself in the mirror, stared appraisingly at her reflection, then decided that she was going to keep her colors bright. She slipped on her dress, slipped into a hot shower, finished with some like sprays of cold water and the healthy young skin of her shapely body.

SHE dressed hastily, descended the stairs and found Mrs. Eaton waiting for her at the table.

"Good morning," Mrs. Eaton said in her colorless voice. "I presume you will have but little appetite this morning. You've heard what's happened. The officers are all back in the room now, taking photographs and measurements. They'll remove the body presently."

"Yes," Millicent said, "I heard what happened. It's horrible. But I have an appetite just the same. After all, you know, I only knew him slightly."

Millicent drew out a chair at the table and, as she did so, a door opened and a dark-haired young woman with clear gray eyes that flashed in quick appraisal entered the room.

Mrs. Eaton said tonelessly, "I don't think you two have met. This is Millicent Graces—Miss Duchene. Miss Graces is Mrs. Jarvis HARRIS' new secretary, and this, Miss Graces, is Vera Duchene, the personal maid and assistant to Mrs. HARRIS."

Millicent was curious about this maid. She bowed and said, "I'm very pleased to meet you. Have you breakfasted?"

Miss Duchene shook her head. "No," she said, "and I'm ravenous."

She sat down and reached for the electric coffee percolator which was bubbling on the table.

"Did you," asked Mrs. Eaton, "hear about what happened?"

"Oh, yes," Vera Duchene said lightly, almost breezily.

Millicent outstretched a piece of toast. "I'm afraid," she said, "I slept quite late this morning. I was very tired. I had a hard day yesterday."

"I heard that you came here yesterday," Miss Duchene said. "I wasn't here last night, you know."

Millicent raised polite eyebrows. "No," Miss Duchene went on. "I was off for the evening. I didn't get in until early this morning."

"Of course," she checked herself hastily and said, "until very late."

At that moment the door opened, and the officer who had interrogated Millicent entered the room, nodded to Mrs. Eaton, and turning toward Vera Duchene, said, "You're Vera Duchene?"

Miss Duchene raised her gray, appraising eyes to the officer, looked him over with cool speculation.

"Yes," she said, breaking off a piece of toast.

"How long have you been here?"

"About six months."

"You knew Harry Felding?"

"Of course."

"Did you know he was dead?"

"I heard it this morning, yes."

"You weren't here last night?"

"Not in the evening. It was my night off."

"Where were you?"

"With friends."

"What time did you return here?"

"Sometime late last night."

"How late?"

"Really, I couldn't say."

"Where do you sleep?"

"In a room in the back of the house."

"Over the garage, isn't it?"

"I believe so, yes."

"You should, then, have heard a shot if it had been fired while you were in your room."

"Yes."

"Well, I didn't hear anything."

"Did you hear the garage door being opened? Did you hear the sound of a car leaving the garage?"

"No."

"I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to check up on the time you returned."

"Perhaps my friends will know."

"You might give me their names."

She stared at him with the impudence which only a pretty woman dares to show to a masculine official.

"And again," she said, "I might not. If you want me to find out, I'll find out—that is, if my friends know—but I wouldn't care to tell you who they are—not now at any rate."

"The officer said slowly, "Well, there's probably no question but what it was a stick-up man or a prowler that did the job, but what we can't find out is why Harry Felding should have been out driving Bob Caine's car."

A stolid-faced cook appeared with soft-boiled eggs and some fried bacon. Millicent ate the food ravenously. Miss Duchene toyed with toast and coffee, let her eyes appraise the officer.

"My," she said, "but you're big and strong! Tell me, do you have to be a good pistol shot in order to be an officer?"

"You certainly do," he said. "These days they make you practice. They send you to a rookie school."

"It must be fascinating."

He smiled at her and said, "Well, it has its advantages."

"You going to be back here," she asked, "making more investigations?"

"I might arrange to come," he said.

Her eyes flickered up to his then dropped back to the coffee cup.

"And you didn't hear anything?" he asked.

"Not a thing," she said.

He left the room. Miss Duchene finished her breakfast, smiled across at Millicent and said, "I hope you'll like it here, but I don't think you will."

"No," Millicent commented non-committally.

"Has Bob Caine tried his particular brand of technique yet?" Vera Duchene inquired.

"I don't know," Millicent laughed.

"It depends on what you mean by his particular brand of technique."

"He's good," Vera Duchene remarked, pushing her chair back from the table. "Well, if I'm going to keep my girlish figure I'd better break away from the food."

Millicent finished her breakfast, kept thinking over Miss Duchene's answers to the officer's questions. Millicent was certain Miss Duchene had started to say that she hadn't returned home until an early hour of the morning. Something had caused her to change her statement, and she had lied to the officer. Why?

Millicent made up her mind she would ask Miss Duchene some questions on her own account.

She found the back stairs, climbed them and had no difficulty locating the room over the garage.

The door was slightly ajar. Millicent pushed it open and said, "May I come in?"

She caught a swirl of quick motion.

Miss Duchene had been standing in front of a mirror. Now she whirled toward a closet door and flung something black into the closet.

Millicent had only one swift glimpse, but she could have sworn that the object was a black ermine coat.

Coughlin Defends Financial Support

Answers Johnson's Attack on His Union for Social Justice

DETROIT, Mich., (AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin defended methods of financing his union for social justice Sunday in what was regarded as an inferential reply to Hugh S. Johnson.

Speaking Saturday night in Chicago, Johnson charged that the priest took for his Union of Social Justice "from the pennies of the poor, much money never accurately accounted for."

Without mentioning Johnson, the Rev. Father Coughlin said that "throughout the ages every bigot who has hated the church and the principles of social justice advocated by the church has trumped up the charge that we are bleeding money from the poor."

"That was the charge made by Stalin in Russia. That is the charge made today in Mexico. That is the recent charge which has assaulted the ears and intelligence of the American public," he continued, "by those who have out-Stalined Stalin."

"May I ask where they get their blood money? They get their money from the crimson hands of Wall Street, crimsoned with the blood of industrial martyrs."

Fr. Coughlin mentioned Johnson's name only once, and then in a routine connection with his address, in which he charged that "this birth certificates of the NRA and the AAA" showed that both were conceived by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

He characterized the charges of the alphabetical New Deal agencies as "not two years of experience, but two years of failure." He lauded President Roosevelt's ideals but declared obstructions had been placed in his path by those to whom he turned for assistance.

Seeking Joy

I sought for Joy
And found it
In the heart song of a bird
Who brushed my darkly thoughts away
With tender things it stirred,
And wrapped in green, new living things
I found a wealth of crystal springs.
I sought for Joy
And found it
In the handclasp of a friend
And just the sort of feeling
He'd be with me to the end
For worldly things are made by men,
But only God could make a friend.

James D. McAllister Tells of Shooting Houston Salesman

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—(AP)—Sheriff Albert W. West, Jr., said Wednesday, that James D. McAllister, 36-year-old ex-convict, admitted after his arrest that he had shot and killed Perry A. Calkins, well-known Houston salesman and bridegroom of a month, near Edinburg Sunday.

McAllister, West said, had served two sentences at the state penitentiary and had only recently been released from the Eastham farm.

The ex-convict was surprised by the officers at 4 a. m., as he lay asleep in a bed at the transient bureau. A 16-inch double barreled sawed off shot gun was found under his bed, together with a pearl handled .38, caliber pistol and Calkins' suitcase.

The man told the police they could find Calkins' automobile in the 500 block of Indianola street. They hurried to the address and located the car, still besmirched with blood.

The arrest in the transient bureau set Sheriff West's men into a frenzy of action. Raiding parties of deputies cleared out the bureau and other downtown places of all their occupants and marched them to the county jail stockade.

More than 600 men were in the parade which lasted from 4:50 to 6:30 p. m. All of the men will be fingerprinted by detectives.

Financial Unrest Is Blamed on U. S.

National City Bank Says We Are Keeping the World Upset

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The National City bank of New York lays a "grave share of the responsibility" on the door-step of the United States for current world currency disorders in its monthly review issued Sunday.

The world currency apple-cart, the bank says, owes its upset in no small measure to the devaluation of the dollar by the United States. Furthermore, it is stated, "it is a mistake to believe that this country can escape the consequences if the disorders become more serious or widespread."

What of early stabilization of world monies? The review asks. In answer four conditions are set out which must be met before lasting stabilization can be attained.

"These conditions are, first, satisfaction in each country with its internal price level and the establishment of an internal equilibrium giving reasonable stability of prices."

"Second, establishment of currency values equating price levels between countries."

"Third, a truce in the arbitrary interference with trade."

"Fourth, elimination of fiscal uncertainties and establishment of such security for capital as will prevent disrupting flights of funds from one country to another in search of safety."

First Two Months Gain But Slightly

February Sales Up 2.2%, Jan.-Feb. 1.6% in St. Louis (This) District

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—The St. Louis Federal reserve bank reported Friday that general business conditions in the Eighth Federal Reserve District during the closing weeks of February and the first half of March continued to reflect the spottiness and unevenness noted during the similar period preceding.

Taken as a whole, the report said, a relatively better exhibit was made by production than distribution of commodities. This report accounted for partly by seasonal considerations, an important factor being the very late Easter date.

Retail trade was in comparatively larger volume than in wholesaling and jobbing trade. Generally, merchants and the public were more conservative in their buying than was the case during the preceding several months.

Advance business on wholesalers' books March 1 was less in general than at the corresponding time last year. Since that date there has been some improvement in ordering, but the betterment was confined chiefly to goods for prompt shipment and merchandise for the Easter trade.

Department store sales in February were 2.2 per cent greater than for the same month in 1934, and slightly greater than the January total this year. The cumulative total for the first two months this year was 1.6 per cent greater than for the same period in 1934. Combined sales in February of all wholesaling and jobbing firms were 18 per cent and 10 per cent smaller, respectively, than a year and a month earlier.

The New Deal

contains no price-fixing provisions. Hence no one could cry "monopoly." Code authority and clothing workers' union members, working with NRA officials and senators who abhor sweatshop wages, were without stretching facts -able to make NRA appear as holy an institution as General Johnson ever claimed in his most enthusiastic moments. A high moment came when several hundred small clothing makers advertised in the New York Times to protest the activities of the Curlee group.

They Still Hunt Indians

With so much excitement around here nearly all of us have forgotten about the Indians and their troubles. But there's one little group that never forgets the Indians -meaning the fellows who are out to fleece them and the men who represent them in Congress. Presumably this lobby will be on the job until the last Indian is dead.

The present effort is to wreck the Wheeler-Howard act, under which Secretary Ickes and Indian Commis-

Remember Jefferson?

Senator McCarran of Nevada: "I am reminded of the lines of Jefferson, when he wrote: 'If we have to apply to Washington as to when we shall sow and when we shall reap, we shall soon go short of bread.'" Senator Glass of Virginia: "I am glad that one senator has boldness enough to quote a line from Jefferson here, because we have deserted every principle he ever announced."

sioner John Collier have sought to rehabilitate the Indian, making him self-reliant and preserving his remaining assets.

Lobbyists persuaded certain congressmen to cut in half the budgeted appropriations for land purchases, an Indian credit system, and tribal organization -all vital parts of the Indian "New Deal" program.

The opposition even includes a missionary group which fights Collier and Ickes because they prohibit coercion of Indians into religious denominations and permit Indians to return to their old tribal religions if they like.

Other malcontents have tried to collect money from the Indians and find themselves balked by the Indian bureau.

Lumber interests are fighting Collier because of the new policy which encourages Indians to cut and mill their own timber instead of leasing the timber land on contract while remaining idle.

Organized cattle and sheep men are striking back because the Interior Department is closing out Indian grazing ranges and turning them back to Indians, whom it already has supplied with 30,000 head of foundation stock.

For weeks, the House Indian Affairs Committee has been hearing complaints against the Indian administration. The investigation appears to have been inspired by men who sought to "blackmail" the bureau into a conciliatory attitude and hardly anyone in Washington has been paying any attention to it.

G. O. P. Spirits Rise

Latest evidence of how much more optimistic Republicans are feeling is the decision of Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island to run for re-election next year. Not having announced his previous intention to withdraw rather than face probable defeat, he doesn't have to announce his change of mind now.
